“Other” Assignment #11

Certain disorders are similar, while others are quite different. They key is to be able to differentiate one disorder from another.

Imagine that you are observing a group therapy session. In such a session, each member of the group will usually talk about his or her problem and seek guidance or support from the other members of the group or the therapist. Assume that in this session there are five people, each of whom has one of the major classifications of disorders (i.e., one has an anxiety disorder, one has a mood disorder, one has a dissociative disorder, one has schizophrenia, and the last one has a personality disorder).

Write out what might be said by each member of the group. Make sure it is obvious which disorder they have based on what was said. In addition, provide justifications for your answers.
